Biographical History

Helena Beatrice Znaniecka Lopata was born in Poznan, Poland on October 1, 1925 to Florian Znaniecki and Eileen Markley. Helena's father was an internationally recognized Polish sociologist; her mother was an American lawyer with a Ph.D. in Law from the University of Chicago. For the first fourteen years of her life, Helena lived with her parents in Poznan, frequently traveling to the United States. When the Nazis entered Poland in September 1939, Helena and her Mother, as members of the intelligentsia, were imprisoned in a concentration camp. Helena's father was in America at that time serving as a visiting professor at Columbia University. Determined to save her daughter and herself, Helena's mother lied to the camp commander claiming to be an American citizen (she had lost her American citizenship when she married Znaniecki and moved to Poland) with important political connections and demanding release for herself and her "orphaned niece (Helena)." The lie proved effective, and Helena and her mother were released from the camp and left for the US soon afterward.

After arriving in the US, Helena enrolled in Champaign Urbana High School, from which she graduated in 1942 after becoming a member of the National Honor Society. Four years later, she received a BA in Sociology (with honors) from the University of Illinois and, a year later, an MA in Sociology also from the University of Illinois. In 1949 Helena began a PhD program at the University of Chicago. Expected to follow her father's area of interest, it was suggested that she continue her father's work in her dissertation. She reluctantly agreed and wrote her dissertation on "The Function of Voluntary Association in an Ethnic Community: Polonia" (a topic that would later become one of her major research interests). Helena received her PhD in Sociology (with honors) in 1954.

In 1946, while still an undergraduate student, Helena met Richard Lopata, a second-generation Polish American, fresh out of the Marine Corps. They married the same year. After earning her PhD, Helena immersed herself for almost twelve years in family life, caring for her home and raising their two children, Theodora, born in 1951, and Stefan, born in 1955. During these years, she taught evening classes part-time in Chicago at DePaul University (1956-1960) and at Roosevelt University (1964-1969). At that time, she began to research suburban housewives—a role she also experienced. Reflecting on that project Dr. Lopata wrote, "No one wanted to read about housewives. Just as my male friends from the University of Chicago, that I saw at meetings, have never recognized that I was doing sociology in which basic 'sensitizing' concepts were applied to studies of women” (Life as a Sociologist, 92). Her study of housewives was expanded, with the help of a grant from The Chicago Tribune, and resulted in a book, Occupation: Housewife (1971).

Dr. Lopata became fully active in research in 1966, when she returned from her first trip to Poland. In her memoirs she writes that during that trip she realized that she “had deserted the obligation of the intelligentsia to contribute to world culture” (Ibid, 91). This realization triggered Helena’s transformation from an American housewife to a sociologist with both national and international involvement. After her return from Poland, Dr. Lopata expanded her study of widows (launched in 1964) to a worldwide scale, attempting to include countries such as Poland, Yugoslavia, Finland, Egypt, Iraq, Israel, Turkey, Korea and Australia. The results of her extensive research were numerous articles and two books—Widowhood in an American City (1973) and Women as Widows: Support Systems (1979) as well as a two-volume edited work, Widows: The Middle East, Asia and the Pacific (1987) and Widows: North America (1987). The latter work addresses widowhood in a variety of countries.

In 1969, Dr. Lopata joined the faculty of the Sociology Department of Loyola University Chicago, where in 1972 she established the Center for Comparative Study of Social Roles. In this Center, Dr. Lopata, supported by a team of researchers (while still immersed in the widowhood study), began a large survey of city women and their occupational and family involvement. This study resulted in a two-volume work, City Women: Work, Jobs, Occupations, Careers: America (Lopata, Barnewolt, & Miller, 1984, 1985). In the meantime, she returned to the subject of her dissertation conducting a study of Polish Americans Community in Chicago. This study resulted in the book, Polish Americans: Status Competition in the Ethnic Group. Dr. Lopata published her books under the names Helena Znaniecki Lopata as well as Helena Znaniecka Lopata; the latter version indicating her gender in Polish.

Over time, Dr. Lopata’s perspective became increasingly feminist in orientation, addressing such issues as the meaning of the terms “sex roles” and “gender,” and focusing on the constraint of women by gender stratification systems. Her studies allowed her to argue that there is not a sex-gender or class role, but rather relations of power and inequality masked by language. Moreover, she argued that this false perception of the role of sex and gender constitutes a framework for social policy that causes women to be in a dependent status position.

In 1997, Dr. Lopata retired. She died on February 12, 2003.

Scope and Content

The Helena Znaniecka Lopata Papers span the period 1870 to 2005 and consist of 53 archival boxes, mostly pertaining to her education and professional career. It includes materials regarding her presentations and publications on primarily the social role of women in society, especially as housewives and widows. The collection also contains one audiocassette tape and one diskette. The materials are divided by subject and arranged alphabetically within series. There are five series in this collection:

Series 1: Biographical, 1870-2005, undated, Boxes 1-3

This series consists of biographical records of Helena Znaniecka Lopata and her closest family members. There are two subseries as follows.

Subseries 1.1: Helena Znaniacka Lopata, 1942-2005, undated, Boxes 1-3

This series contains Dr. Lopata's Curriculum Vitae, dissertation from the University of Chicago, autobiographical writings, papers and articles about her (most notably an issue of Sociological Origins dedicated to her after her death), and her personal correspondence.

Subseries 1.2: Family Members, 1870-1994, undated, Box 2

This series contains manuscripts created by her parents and husband, including correspondence between her father and his relatives, writings by her mother, and her husband's CV.

Series 2: Professional, 1948-2003, undated, Boxes 2, 4-36

This series is arranged into several subseries and documents Dr. Lopata's professional career as a faculty member at Loyola University Chicago. It includes conference papers, a large quantity of professional correspondence, surveys and other materials related to her research grants, as well as correspondence related to her participation in a number of national councils and professional societies.

Subseries 2.1: Conferences and Presentations, 1970-2000, undated, Boxes 2, 4-6

This subseries is alphabetized by conference sponsor. It consists of papers that Dr. Lopata delivered at professional conferences and the related correspondence.

Subseries 2.2: Correspondence, 1948-2003, undated, Boxes 6-17

This subseries consists of Dr. Lopata's voluminous professional correspondence. When possible, the original provenance was maintained. Otherwise, manuscripts have been filed by date within the folders labeled "Correspondence: Professional."

Subseries 2.3: Faculty Appointment at LUC, 1970-1998, undated, Box 17

This subseries consists primarily of correspondence with Loyola University's faculty and administration.

Subseries 2.4: Grants and Research, 1962-1990, undated, Boxes 18-30

This subseries is organized alphabetically by topic and consists of material pertaining to research conducted by Dr. Lopata. It includes applications for grants, research proposals, accounting documents, surveys completed by research subjects, and correspondence regarding subcontracts. Topics of research and proposed research include the role of the housewife, widowhood, women and work, and American women.

Subseries 2.5: National Council Participation, 1977-1992, undated, Boxes 30-31

This subseries is organized alphabetically and consists of material, primarily correspondence and reports, pertaining to national groups in which Dr. Lopata participated.

Subseries 2.6: Other Professional Activities, 1973-1996, undated, Box 31

This subseries is organized alphabetically and consists of correspondence and other materials related to activities in which Dr. Lopata participated that cannot be classified under any of the other subseries.

Subseries 2.7: Professional Organizations, 1950-2002, undated, Boxes 32-35

This subseries is organized alphabetically by the name of the organization and consists of awards, correspondence, newsletters and meeting materials of professional societies in which Dr. Lopata participated.

Subseries 2.8: Teaching, 1960-2000, undated, Boxes 35-38

This subseries is organized alphabetically and contains Dr. Lopata's course syllabi, class notes and related material.

Series 3: Publications, 1930-2003, undated, Boxes 38-51

This series is organized alphabetically and consists of articles, books, and other works published by Dr. Lopata, as well as publications by others that she retained.

Subseries 3.1: Articles, 1961-2002, undated, Boxes 38-42

This subseries is organized alphabetically by article title. A few of these articles have been translated from English and published in Polish.

Subseries 3.2: Books, 1967-1995, undated, Boxes 43-44

This subseries is organized alphabetically by book title. It consists primarily of correspondence relating to publishing each work as well as some advertising material and responses to the works from reviewers and readers.

Subseries 3.3: Book Chapters, Contributions and Edited Works, 1957-2003, undated, Boxes 44-46. Dr. Lopata also contributed to several edited works, of her own and of others. This subseries is organized alphabetically by book title.

Subseries 3.4: Book Reviews, 1972-2002, undated, Box 46

This subseries is organized alphabetically by the title of the book reviewed by Dr. Lopata.

Subseries 3.5: Other, 1962-2001, undated, Boxes 46-47

This subseries is organized alphabetically. It consists of publishing activities that fall outside of the above classifications, including Dr. Lopata's participation in a bereavement series on cassette, and writing of entries in encyclopedias. It also contains extensive bibliographies used in her research and publishing.

Subseries 3.6: Publications by Others, 1930-2000, undated, Boxes 47-51

This subseries is organized alphabetically by article title and contains articles and excerpts from books of materials written by others and retained by Dr. Lopata. Several articles are written in Polish.

Series 4: Audiovisual, 1972-1989, Box 52

This series contains an audiocassette of Dr. Lopata’s contribution to the Death, Grief and Bereavement series and a 5.25” backup diskette.

Series 5: Restricted, Box 53

This series is restricted until 2036.
